Let us be known, genuine, disciples

- 1. Sit in your wholeness strength group
(see page 3 of your Wholeness Test results)
- 2. Make smaller groups of 3 people
(Preferably people you don't know as well)
- 3. Introduce yourselves

Even if strangers, know that each of you need to experience evangelised discipleship in dialogue

Disciple Reality Check

Are you helping someone else to answer the other two questions?
(by having this conversation, you will be able to answer "yes" to this)

Do you know what Jesus delights in when He looks at you? (fixed leg)
(the left side of page 8 in your results may give some clues)

Are you addressing what Jesus most wants to transform in your life? (free leg)
(the right side of page 8 in your results may give some clues)

What did you discover together?

The path people travel among us

Why does this matter?

Our Strength

We are grateful that this is a people who still care.

We see it in the way people pray for one another, in the instinct to move toward those in need, and in the desire to help people find life in Christ. We feel that our leaders genuinely care about people — not just programs or outcomes — and that matters deeply to us...

Our Struggle

At the same time, many of us quietly struggle to find places where we can be deeply known, trusted, and formed over time...

We often experience warmth, activity, and mission, yet still feel uncertain where we truly belong beyond the larger gathering or the immediate demands of ministry. Some of us long for friendships within the church that feel dependable enough to carry real life — not just shared tasks or polite conversations...

Why does this matter?

What draws us near

What we notice first is that you seem to care.

Many churches feel distant, self-protective, or preoccupied with themselves. But the Salvation Army often appears willing to move toward people in need rather than away from them. We see practical help, concern for struggling people, and a willingness to pray, listen, and respond...

What gives us pause

At the same time, some of us are unsure whether we could truly belong here over time.

Some of us who come needing support worry that we may receive help without ever really becoming part of a trusted community. We wonder where people talk honestly about life, where friendships become dependable, and where struggling people are patiently formed rather than simply assisted...

What is it revealing?

The global Salvation Army profile reveals a movement rich in compassion, prayer, and outward mission, yet carrying signs of strain in the deeper relational and formative structures needed to sustain that mission over time.

The Scriptures repeatedly refuse to separate those two realities.

The biblical vision is never:

mission without formation,

compassion without community,

or sacrifice without shared life.

The people of God are called not only to move toward the world in mercy, but also to become the kind of community capable of carrying mercy faithfully across generations.

What follows are several Scripture reflections that speak directly into the tensions emerging from the data...

How can we make progress?

1. What does Jesus delight in when He looks at you?

In what ways am I already helping carry the mission of Jesus through prayer, practical care, encouragement, generosity, or faithful service?

2. What is Jesus wanting to transform in your life right now?

Am I becoming deeply rooted in relationships where I am honestly known, supported, challenged, and prayed for — or am I mostly carrying my life alone?

3. Who is Jesus inviting you to walk alongside?

Who around me may need not only practical help, but deeper friendship, encouragement, prayer, and spiritual formation?

How can we make progress?

1. A Trellis Addition

Adding a shared Disciple Reality Check culture

The strongest addition suggested by the current profile is not another program, but a shared discipleship rhythm...

2. A Trellis Removal

Removing structures and expectations that unnecessarily centralise responsibility

Pastoral overload emerges as one of the clearest signals in the profile. This does not appear to arise primarily from lack of commitment, but from systems that unintentionally train people to rely heavily on officers and a small inner circle...

3. A Trellis Adjustment

Adjusting pathways from participation into formation and leadership...
